DUNA MUSEUM
Esztergom, Hungary, 2000
Art of Building - K.Bende, G. Frank

The offices house the museum's research department, archives and library in the newly converted attic of an 18th c. museum building in Esztergom, Hungary. The layout of all rooms were determined by their users and their specific needs relating to their research and collections. With the exception of chairs, the office furniture was custom made, using pine wood and non-toxic finishes: milk paint and beeswax. The furniture represents a mixture of modular and site-specific units to accommodate the fluid space of the two hundred year old attic
